2. Measures implemented in order to promote sound and effective risk management, align the interests of the individuals and GIL and avoid excessive risk taking

The Remuneration Policy of GIL has been designed to:

- Be in line with the business strategy, objectives, values and interests of GIL;
- Not encourage excessive risk taking as compared to the investment policy of the Funds which are managed by GIL; and
- Enable GIL to align the interests of the Funds and their investors with those of the identified staff that manages such Funds, and to achieve and maintain a sound financial situation.

3. Description of the structure of remuneration

GIL recognizes and rewards its employees with an opportunity to share in GIL's overall success. It is designed to link the achievement of individual and company results with measurable, objective rewards. At the end of each fiscal year, employees are evaluated on their performance measured by an assessment of competencies and achievement against predetermined goals. Incentives awarded are based on a combination of the individual's performance and the company's financial results as well as the performance of the Funds concerned. The assessment of performance is set in a multi-year framework appropriate to the holding period recommended to the investors of the Funds in order to ensure that the assessment process is based on the longer-term performance of the Funds and its investment risks and that the actual payment of performance-based components of remuneration is spread over the same period. The remuneration includes a fixed and variable component:

- a) Fixed remuneration: Fixed remuneration is defined as base salary plus any benefits GIL provides to its employees which may include a company car, pension contributions, medical and life assurance premiums lunch vouchers. Base salary levels (including benefits) are set with reference to market benchmarking data, which are reviewed regularly. The fixed remuneration represents the most important part of the sums allocated by GIL to the given employees per financial year.
- b) Variable remuneration: GIL will, in principle, attribute to eligible employees, a variable compensation (short term incentive) if GIL has made (for the concerned calendar/financial year) a gross profit, whereby the gross profit is determined at a stage before the payment of taxes and elements of the variable remuneration.

The total variable remuneration will be distributed to eligible employees after receipt of the opinion rendered by the Remuneration Committee to the Board of Directors.

The measurement of performance used to calculate the variable remuneration includes a comprehensive adjustment mechanism to integrate all relevant types of risk, including, among others, the relevant environmental, social and governance (ESG) aspects, in order to avoid excessive risk taking with regard to direct or indirect sustainability risks.

The Remuneration Committee will base its opinion on the appropriateness of the variable remuneration (in general and specific individual cases) according to the parameters set in the Remuneration Policy and in compliance with the prevailing local regulation.
